P R E F A C E

IN a work intended only for Schools and worshipping Societies, it was thought unnecessary to insert a treatise on Music. An improved plan upon the present practice is adopted, which, it is expected, with the assistance of an able teacher, will be found sufficient for the purposes of this work. Since the publication of the first edition of the UNION HARMONY, the Editor, in association with Messrs. GRAM and HOLYOKE, has published a work, entitled, "The MASSACHUSETT COMPILER of Theoretical and Practical Elements of Sacred, Vocal Music," containing the most essential and interesting information for composers, teachers and practitioners. In a young country, like ours, where no regular profession of Music has been adopted, such a work, compiled from the most eminent European masters, was deemed necessary.

The greatest exception in the present mode of teaching, is the manner of expressing the different parts of the staff by sol, fa; which by no means affords those accurate distinctions necessary to enable the pupil at all times to comprehend the state of the octave. This evil is remedied in the work alluded to above; and the Editor hopes that a more general acquaintance therewith, will soon supersede the necessity of continuing the present practice.

A number of pages in this edition are appropriated to original Music, designed to supply the deficiency of tunes which embrace two verses. In the choice of materials, the taste and improvement of the numerous practitioners of Music has been a principal motive. It is not presumed, however, that all the pieces which compose so large a collection, will meet the approbation of a learned reviewer: But as the present is an age of genius and enterprise, it is expected that the time is not far distant when Americans, so justly celebrated for other improvements, will also excel in this sublime art.

Grateful for the unexpected encouragement given to this work, in the rapid sale of the first edition, the Editor pledges himself that his utmost endeavours shall be exerted to render all future editions worthy the patronage of a deserving community.

AFTER the scholar has become familiar with his letters, as they are affixed to the several lines and spaces on the staff, he may proceed to call the notes by the names of the letters which they represent, beginning and ending at G, repeating them up and down, alternately, until he can recite them readily without the book. In the next place it will be necessary to sing them by the names of the letters, observing at the same time that between B and C, and between E and F, is but one degree or half a tone.

N. B. This lesson is of great importance to the beginner, and should be understood as the foundation of all musical knowledge and improvements.

LESSON II.

WHERE there are no flats nor sharps, me is in B.

But if B be flat, me is in	E	If F be sharp, me is in	F
If B and E be flat, me is in	A	If F and C be sharp, me is in	C
If B, E and A be flat, me is in	D	If F, C and G be sharp, me is in	G
If B, E, A and D be flat, me is in	G	If F, C, G and D be sharp, me is in	D

Above me, the notes ascending are, faw, sol, law, faw, sol, law; below, descending, are law, sol, faw, law, sol, faw, and then me recurs either way.

Observe, that the semi-tones are always found between me and faw, and law and faw.

Rests.

THE notes and rests thus arranged, explain, at one view, the proportion they bear to each other; the 1st being twice as long as the 2d, the 2d twice as long as the 3d, the 3d twice as long as the 4th, &c.—The rests are called notes of silence; whenever they occur in a tune, the performer is to rest as long as he would be sounding the note it represents.

N. B. According to ancient tradition, the semibreve rest fills a bar in all moods.

L E S S O N IV.

- A staff  IS five lines and their spaces, calculated to contain the twelve different sounds or degrees in music.
- A ledger line  Is added when notes ascend or descend beyond the limits of the staff.
- A brace  Shows how many parts move together.
- Tied notes  Imply that as many as are tied together should be sung to one syllable.

The cliff is the first character affixed to a tune. It is considered as the key to open the scale of characters, and fully determines their import. If the cliff be moved from its usual place (which in some instances it is) it transposes the whole staff, by carrying the letter it naturally stands on with it. In general the tenor and treble cliff stand on G; the counter on C; and the bass on F.— In this collection the G cliff is mostly used in all the upper parts, being most convenient in vocal Music.

- Tenor and treble cliff
- Counter cliff
- Bass cliff
- A flat  Set before a note serves to lower the sound one degree, or semi-tone.
- A sharp  Set before a note serves to raise the sound one degree.

N. B. Both flats and sharps set at the beginning of a tune, have the above influence through the tune, unless contradicted by the intervention of a natural.

- A natural  Restores a note made flat or sharp to its primitive sound.
- A repeat  Directs the performer to sing the same word or strain twice.
- Figures  1 2 At the end of a strain, direct the performer back to a repeat, leaving the note under figure 2 unsung the first time, and the note under under figure r unfuncg the last time, unless both figures are connected together with a slur, in which case both should be fung the last time.

A hold

Gives the performer liberty to continue the sound of the note, to which it refers, beyond its common length. The influence of this character, if rightly managed, is very pleasing. Whenever it occurs, the school or choir should discontinue beating time, dwelling sweetly on the sound, until the master resumes the time in its proper order.

A mark of distinction
Figure

Directs the performer to sing and pronounce the note to which it points, emphatically. Diminishes the three notes to which it is affixed to the time of two.

A point

Adds to a note at the right of which it stands, one half of its original length.

*A slur

Directs the performer to sing all the notes which it includes to one syllable.

A direct

At the end of a stave, shews where the first note stands in the succeeding stave.

A bar

Divides the time into equal parts.

A double bar  Shews the end of a strain.

A close  Is affixed to the end of a tune.

Apoggituras  Are small notes which share the time with the succeeding or principal note, according to the length and situation of the principal.

LESSON V.

COMMON TIME MOODS.

First,  THIS mood is the slowest now in use. Crotchets are performed, in the time of one second to each. One semibreve, or its quantity in other notes or rests, fills a bar, which requires four beats, two down, and two up. The accents fall on the first and third parts of the bar.

Second,  This mood requires a little quicker movement. The same quantity of notes and rests fills a bar. It is beat and accented like the first, excepting when the tune is principally composed of minims and crotchets, in which case the method of performing it with two beats in a bar is to be preferred.

Third,  This mood requires a quicker movement than the last, having but two beats in a bar; one beat down, and one up. The same number of notes, or rests, are required to each bar. The accents fall on the first and third parts of the bar, but principally on the first.

This

* The common method of slurring is superfluous and inconvenient; it is therefore discontinued where the notes are tied together. And where a chain of tied notes include a succeeding note in the same syllable, a short slur is used to connect them.

Fourth,  This mood requires a still quicker movement, having but one minim, or its quantity of other notes, in a bar, which are beat and accented like the last, only one third quicker.

TRIPLE TIME MOODS.

First,  THIS is the slowest movement in triple time. Three minims fill a bar, which requires three motions of the hand, two down, and one up. Minims, in this mood, should be performed in the same time as crotchets in the first mood of common time. The accents fall on the first part of the bar.

Second,  Contains three crotchets in a bar—beat and accented like the first—about one third part quicker.

Third,  Contains three quavers in a bar—beat and accented like the second—nearly one third quicker.

COMPOUND TIME MOODS.

First,  THIS mood contains 6 crotchets in a bar, of two equal beats, three down, and three up. Each motion requires one second of time. It is accented principally on the first and fourth parts of the bar.

Second,  Contains six quavers in a bar—beat and accented like the last—about one quarter part quicker.

☞ In beating time, the hand should fall in the first, and rise in the last part of the bar, in all moods.

LESSON VI.

A KEY in music is the principal note or tone to which the whole piece is accommodated, on which the bass always ends, and from which the pitch of the tune should be taken. There are but two keys in music, viz. the major and the minor. The major key is “adapted to express the cheerful passions, and the minor is expressive of the solemn and pathetic.”

To determine the key of a tune, find the last note of the bass and if the 3d above contain 4 semi-tones it is major, if but 3, it is minor. See the following examples.

	Ex. 1.	Ex. 2.	Ex. 3.	Ex. 4.
	Major Key.	Minor Key.	Minor Key.	Major Key.
Second,
	law fol law.	law me law.	law me law.	law fol law.
	2 2	2 1	2 1	2 2

The cyphers under the notes shew the distance of each from the preceding, i. e. from C to D, and from D to E, in the 1st ex. are two semi-tones each, which constitute the major 3d. But E being flatted in the 2d ex. the 3d is reduced one degree, which makes the minor 3d. In the 3d ex. from B to C is but one semi-tone, of consequence the 3d is minor; but in the 4th ex. C is sharped, which adds one degree to its original distance from the key note, and is constituted the major 3d. Thus the octave is subjected to a continual change at the pleasure of the composer, the state of which should be comprehended by the pupil, in order to perform with satisfaction to himself and pleasure to them who hear.

Observe,

Observe, that whatever letter the me is transposed to, the same rule is to be observed in determining the key, as in the foregoing examples; and as long as the present mode of sol-faw-ing exists, the major key may be known by the name of faw next above me, and the minor by law next below me.

N. B. The first note in each example is the key note.

A THOROUGH knowledge of the preceding lessons is indispensably necessary; the attainment of them will sufficiently qualify the pupil for practice. In the next place he may proceed to some plain tune, on the major key. Teachers of music should take great care in the first setting out, that their scholars contract no disagreeable habits; because much of their future proficiency and manner of performance, depends on the first impressions. Performing by the words should not be introduced until the school has attained to a just notion of time and sound, and can read any tune by note and letter, without embarrassment.

Every performer should have that part assigned to him which he can perform with the greatest ease; otherwise the performance will be unnatural, and consequently unpleasing; and no performer should sing a solo, or any other strain which belongs to a different part, without particular desire. One voice on a high part, generally requires two or three on the bass, i. e. a school or choir should have more than one half the voices on the bass. Where this is not practicable, a bass viol would be of great service, if the person who uses it is thorough in the knowledge of the instrument.

OF PRONUNCIATION.

GOOD pronunciation is one of the first and principal beauties of singing. The mouth should be opened freely, but not wide; either extreme would destroy a good tone, and prevent just expression. Many singers who read and speak tolerably well, are extremely erroneous in their manner of pronouncing some particular words, when they are set to music; for instance, the words reason, hearken, token, &c. which have but one accent, are often sung rea-son, hear-ken, to-ken, which is very disagreeable and improper. Words which end in ple, ble, &c. are often falsely accented on the last syllable, which renders them thus, pel, bel, &c. Words ending in y, with a few exceptions, should be pronounced as ending in e, or short i. The l should be silent in walk, talk, calm, &c. In fine, the best direction which can be given is this; let every word be sung distinctly, smoothly, and gracefully, every way conformably to the best rules of speaking.

OF ACCENT.

ACCENT is another very important part of music, which is inseparably connected with good pronunciation: It is properly an agreeable swell or force of the voice; but it is often erroneously applied to the notes, more like marks of distinction than otherwise. If the poetry be good, and the music well adapted to it, the accents will fall on those parts of the bars, in the different moods of time, which are pointed out in the fifth lesson; but where the music does not coincide with the proper emphasis of the words, it should give way, or bend to the words. Nothing is more common than false accenting, the principal occasion of which is harsh or loud singing. Many fingers make two accents on one note, more particularly on a pointed note in binary time, which immediately precedes a fuge or repeat, which they break off with such violence, as is truly shocking to a delicate ear. This injudicious practice effectually tends to prevent soft and graceful singing, and renders the most pleasing compositions disgusting to the audience. Were it possible for a performer of common taste, to hear himself at a distance, thus violate the nicest rules of harmony, he would not be guilty of it a second time. A pointed note which fills three fourths of a bar, notwithstanding it includes two bar accents, cannot consistently receive but one. A semi-breve should be struck soft, gently swelled to the centre, and diminished to the end. A number of long notes, driven through bars, should be sounded full and smooth to the end. A chain of notes should be sung sest, keeping the lips and teeth apart until the slur is finished.

OF TIME.

IN beating time, great care is necessary that the hand do not influence the voice, by creating misplaced accents, which is almost an universal error. To prevent this, avoid all violent motion; the least motion of the hand or finger is sufficient to preserve time. No strain should be sung any faster in the quickest mood of time, than will admit of plain, distinct pronunciation. By hurrying a piece of music, performers are apt to sing harsh and uneven, in consequence of which, the beauty of the subject is obscured, and confusion introduced. Hence we learn that the subject and occasion should govern the movement.

OF SYNCOPATION.

IT is very difficult to do justice to the composition where notes are driven through bars, and otherwise interfere with the natural course of time and accent, without an able instructor. The common practice is very injudicious and erroneous. In the 3d mood of common time, where a minim stands between two crotchets, it is common to perform them like four crotchets, which destroys the intention of the author, and greatly injures the words; particularly where the first crotchet and succeeding minim are slurred together, they should be sung as smooth as possible, in order to prevent a second accent on the word or syllable to which they are adapted. The same precaution is necessary in all moods of time wherever an instance of this kind occurs.

OF SOFT SINGING.

IN a school, or choir, where soft music is successfully inculcated, it would be difficult for an attentive observer to point out many imperfections. Soft music is always accompanied with graceful motion, just expression, proper accent, and captivating harmony. On the other hand, harsh singing is attended with convulsive motion, bad pronunciation, misapplied accent, and a disgusting jarring. The latter is too just a description of the present mode of singing, occasioned in a great measure by a mistaken idea, which many entertain, that good music consists principally in singing loud; but just the reverse of this is the case. In performing fortes and fortissimos, the voice should not be extended beyond its natural elevation; in performing pianos the voice should be reduced to as small a degree of sound, as will just admit admit of intelligible pronunciation; and in all common strains, a medium should be constantly observed, neither so faint, as to dwindle into indifference, nor so loud as to admit of a single harsh tone. Such a practice, if once adopted and pursued, will not fail to arrest the attention and gain the approbation of every adequate judge of music. A reform in these particulars must begin with teachers of music; hence the great importance of employing such instructors, as will, by their example as well as precept, inculcate soft, smooth, and graceful singing. Solos should be sung soft, high notes clear, but not loud. In singing counter, great attention is necessary, that every note be touched soft, and smooth, otherwise the counter will predominate, which is very inconsistent with the principles of music.

OF DIRECTORY TERMS.

A STRICT and constant adherence to the terms, moderato, vivace, forte, piano, &c. will add greatly to the beauty of the performance, and are of as great importance as any other characters in music. No one, it is presumed, will dispute the necessity of such terms as are occasionally placed over the music; yet singers in general are so regardless of them, that the effect they are intended to produce on the audience, is entirely lost. When the term moderato occurs, the strain should be performed at least one third part slower: The same difference should be observed in all other terms, particularly in piano. The surprising good effect of such a method, if once properly adhered to, will be seen by the attention it will command in every audience.

OF GRACES and ORNAMENTS.

THE trill, notes of transition, &c. have not been attended to in the preceding rules; it being much better to omit, than attempt them in young schools. The most important graces and ornaments of music, are natural accomplishments; it is therefore impossible to acquire them mechanically, so as to add to the real beauty of the music. Upon the whole, let every note be sung as it stands, without affecting any airs, or supposed graceful variations. The greatest ornament in singing, is a decent, modest deportment, and a heart deeply impressed with a due reverence for the name and worship of that infinitely exalted Being, to whom we owe our existence, and every blessing, and to whose praise we should ever tune our voices.

PARTICULAR REMARKS.

IN tunes of four parts in score, the parts are thus arranged:—1st, the bass—2d, the tenor—3d, the counter—and 4th, the treble. In tunes of three parts, the middle part is considered as the air, where it is not expressed otherwise in the beginning of the stave.
